MEMORANDUM FOR: The Record

SUBJECT : Recommendation No. 13 of the Joint Study Group

1. There follows a summary of a meeting held in my office Tuesday, 11 June, with [redacted] has been designated by General Joseph F. Carroll, Director, Defense Intelligence Agency as the Department of Defense representative to prepare the Department of Defense reply to Recommendation No. 13 of the Joint Study Group.

2. [redacted] discussed with me, but did not show me, his draft of the Department of Defense position on Recommendation No. 13 which, if signed by General Carroll, will presumably go through the Joint Chiefs to the Secretary of Defense. The position paper in the words of [redacted] is a "heavy plagiarism" from the 4 August report of [redacted] which was addressed to me on 20 September 1961 with endorsements by Major General John M. Williams, Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence, Department of the Army and Major General Garrison B. Coverdale, Commanding General, U.S. Army Intelligence Center at Ft. Holabird.

3. The proposed position paper in effect recommends that CIA and the Department of Defense continue to train separately in their separate installations. Among the reasons for this position were the difference of missions of the respective intelligence services, the difference in objectives, the expense of building additional facilities [redacted] to train approximately [redacted] Department of Defense intelligence officers per annum, and the need for compartmentation of students. The proposal, however, recommends exchange of instructors and training materials between Defense and CIA.

4. Unless the proposed report is drastically changed by [redacted] superiors, I do not believe the Agency will be required an increase in its budget or personnel ceiling in order to meet additional training requirements from the Defense Intelligence Agency or the Department of Defense within the purview of Recommendation No. 13 of the Joint Study Group.
